On January 31, 1981, six members of the American Heritage Class set off for Colonial Williamsburg. After planning for weeks, studying maps, and viewing architectural films, one member said, "For awhile I was sure I had joined an architectural elective." In carefully packed suitcases, each member had his own costume, which he had worked on for weeks previously.

Upon arriving at Williamsburg, cramped students began to explore the area and see the sights. They attended three evening programs, two of which were 18th Century music concerts, and one of which was an 18th Century play. The students posed with the musicians, and were able to talk to them about their instruments and music.

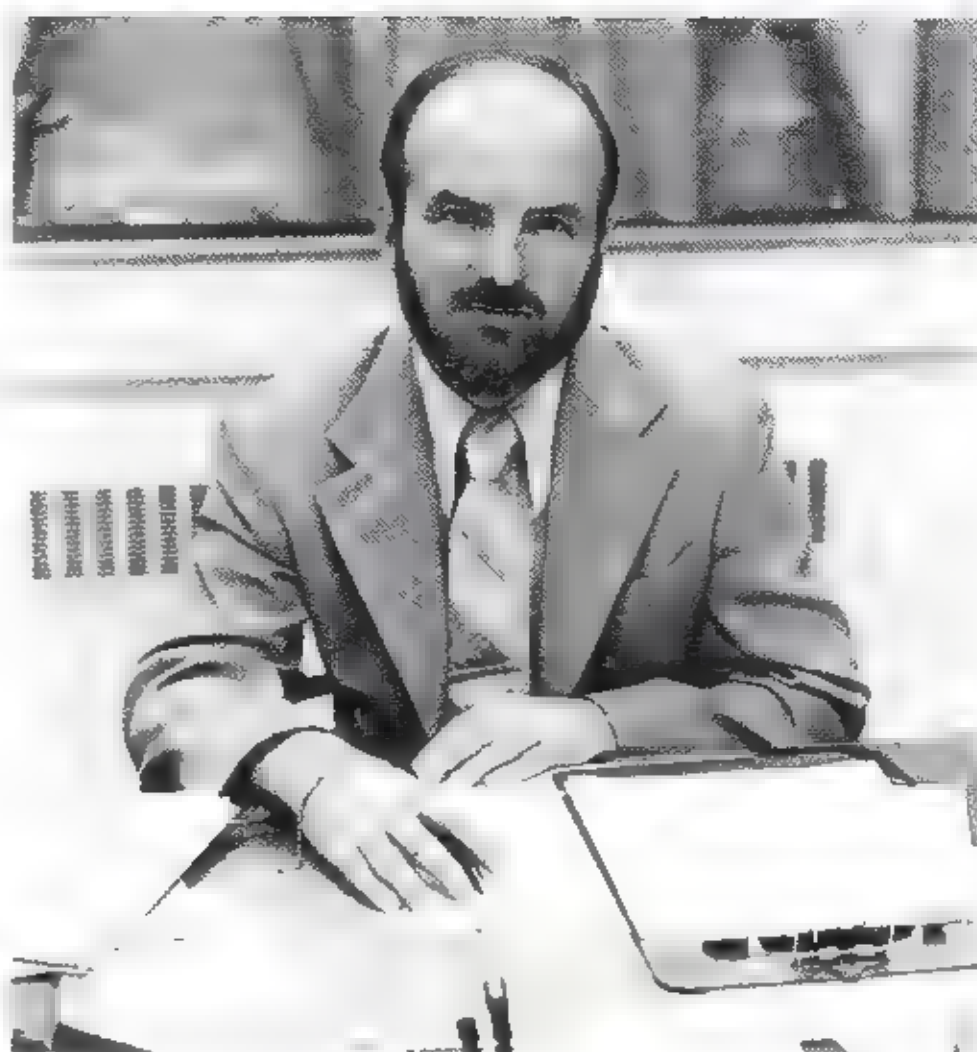

After their three-day journey back in time, the American Heritage members were exhausted, however, no complaints were heard. As Beth Congreve wrote, "Our Colonial evenings were filled with music and laughter — what more could anyone ask?"

The heart remembers everything
Although the mind forgets
The raptures and the agonies,
The hopes and the regrets.
The heart remembers April
When the snows of winter fall —
Hearing on the bitter wind
The sweetest song of all
When Youth has had its shining hour
And Love its golden day,
Time may fade the colors
And the glory turns to gray,
But something of the magic lingers,
Never to depart,
Deep down in the secret places
Of the quiet heart

Joann,

Is one of my best, closest, and dearest friends. There were times when we were like sisters and I hope we still are. Remember all the good times we had over the years. A girl like you deserves the best, and I've never seen you happier than what you are now with Kenny. Good luck with him and next year at college. I hope we can keep in touch while you are at college. You will be one of the first to when I get engaged. Maybe over the summer all four of us can get together and do something. Take care and stay out of trouble.

Love + friends always,

Sharon Roth

Jo Ann,
To a nice, but quiet friend. You should learn to talk more often.
Cindy says you talk a lot but I never hear you. Good luck in the future and with your boy friend. Friends,
Brenda Engler

Johnn,
To a really good friend who I'm gonna miss Good luck with your cute boyfriend. And I wish you especially good luck in college friends forever
